

The automatic gain control filter (AGC) is a means of evening out the amplitudes of anomalies. This makes more subtle features in the data visible. The filter also acts as a high-pass filter by suppressing the longer wavelengths.